LONDON, June 8.-This was the sixth day of the trial of the suit brought by tir William Gordon-Cumming against Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Lycett Green, and Mr. Berkeley Levett for damages on account of alleged slanderous statements made by them in regard to baccarat playing at Tranby Croft. near Doncaster, in September last. Previous to and after the opening of the Queen's Bench tice at 10:30 A. M. the same scenes which were witnessed on each day of the trial last week were repeated inside and outside the New Law Courts, with the exception of the fact that m.ch of the noise and bustle of this part of the Strand was wanting to-day owing to the omnibus strike. The absence of those clumsy, nearly always over-loaded vehicles semble in front of the New Law Courts; but, on the other hand, there was an almost entire absence of that ceaseless rumble of wheels and touting" of omnibus drivers and conductors in that and similar neighborhoods, much to the relief of the nervous people who have business

There was an increase in the number et "four-wheelers," "hansoms," and other such rehicles arriving and departing at and all of the fushionables of last week's andiance sanaged to appear (fully equipped with busheon baskets and flasks) in their now tamiliar pinces, from which they watch the desilopment of the great baccarat scandal. Sir William Gorden-Cumming decidedly had his innings in the baccarat game as played in court to-day. Lerd Coleridge, the Lord Chief Justice of England, when he took his seat on the bench was finnled on either side by about twentyfre ladies. With the exception of the reserved space left for the Prince of Wales, and which the latter promptly occupied, the body of the court was filled with barristers, the plaintiff, the defendants, representatives of the press. the jury, and a low specially favored male spectators, while the galleries were in the sain part filled with fashionably dressed ladies. The plaintiff. Sir William Gordon-Cumg. was as dignified as ever. and, according to all outward signs, utterly unruffled and susupied a position almost under the jury box. while in the same row, only further away from the jury, sat the defendants.

During the delivery of the latter part of Sir Charles Russell's speech for the defence, the portion uttered to-day, the plaintiff calmly listened to it with studied dignity, never for a second turning his head towards Sir Charles Russell, who, but a few feet away from Sir William, was do ouncing the latter in the most erere manner. The Prince of Wales, throughout the present legal proceedings, has demonstrated the fact that he is "sticking" to the Wilsons, and that he will continue to do so. Sir Charles Russell, upon the opening of court, resumed his address for the defence, interrupted on Friday last by the adjournment I the Court of Queen's Bench until to-day. Bir Charles commenced by calling attention to Sir William Gordon-Cumming's methods of the leablings of Mr. Berkeisy Levest, who it

"No, thank God, the charge that a distinguished officer has been caught cheating at cards is not so frequent here in England as to be lightly dismissed or carriessly recorded, and, although Mrs. Wilson says she dismissed the subject from her mind and did not tell her husband about it, men like Gen. Williams and Lord Coventry, accustomed to the best suclety in the land, would not regard it as of so small importance."

Lord Coventry, accustomed to the best society in the land, would not regard it as of so small importance."

The Solicitor-General also dwelt strongly upon the fact that the Frince of Wales. Gen. Williams, and Lord Coventry all based their opinions on Arthur Stanley Wilson's statement, which the latter had since modified, and upon the fact that the Frince of Wales. Lord Coventry, and Gen. Williams testified that they had not reen a single suspicious act upon the part of Sir William Gordon-Cumming.

The Solicitor-General also said that old, experienced players were watching the game with keen eyes and yet they saw nothing suspicious in the plaintiff's play, but, on the other hand, inexperienced players blundered, and then, as a result of this blundering, attacked the character of an h-norshle man. The speaker then referred to the fact that Arthur Stanley Wilson testified that the only period when he saw the bluccarat playing, and that it was without having been previously warned that something was woned.

hurriedly left his seat on the bench and, completely disregarded the humble courteeles of several dames who were seated in his immediate vicinity.

After luncheon Sir Edward Clarke resumed his address to the jury, saying that there was nothing in the accusations against the plaintiff that could not be explained by the system of play which Bir William Gordon-Cumming adopted, though the jury were asked to believe that the plaintiff had descended to adopting the tricks of the lowest sharper.

The Soliciter-General then commented surcastically upon the ornamental position occupied by the head of the Wilson family, who, counsel said, was not consulted throughout the proceedings, and who apparently had to give way to his son-in-law, Mr. Lycett Green, who was deputed to defend the family honor. "A man of the mature age of thirty-one," said the Solicitor-General, cuttingly, referring to Mr. Green, "who rode to the hounds four days in the week.

"When Mr. Green heard the Prince of Wales asy," Give him another tenner: I wish people would put their stakes in a consultous place," be (Mr. Green came to the conclusion that Sir William Gordon-Cumming had been cheating, and rose from the table full of a valiant resolution, but changing his mind. "What was his William Gordon-Cumming's reason for signing the document about which so much has been said fire an effective pause, "to save the Prince of Wales."

"A hat was he mass of the people." Sir Edward continued, uttering each word with startling distinctness, "it is known that a club or innocould be presecuted for playing baccarat, and in agree when has been asked the foliotor-General, and dramatically rail the Bollettor-General, and dramatically rail the solicito

A slight ripple of applause, which was promptly suppressed, broke out in court as the eloquent jurist uttered the last words in a most touching and impressive manner.

CLERGYMEN KNOW MAUSER.

SOMETIMES HE THREATENED TO BURN THEIR CHURCHES FOR THEM.

He had a Mand In-Some of the Clergy-men Gave Him Money for Peace, Detective Brady of the Tremont police found out a good deal yesterday about young George Mauser, the professional beggar who is accused of shooting at the Rev. Dr. Clark Wright of the Tremont Methodist Church For the past year, at east, Mauser has been many instances he has threatened to do some-He has sometimes threatened to burn the churches. How many of the 500 ministers whose names he had in his little book he has approached he alone knows.

When the Rey. Dr. Wright went to the weekly meeting of the Methodist ministers yesterday morning he was informed on all sides by the preachers that they had been bothered by the same young man. Many of them admitted that they had been badgered into giving money to him.

The Rev. Mr. Colden, pastor of the Methodist Church at Washington avenue and 165th street, had been approached by young Mauser several times. Mauser asked him point blank for Rev. B. F. Kidder of the Rose Hill Methodist Church related a similar experience. Mauser G. Mauser said he was one of Mr. Woodbridge's supporters. When Mr. Woodbridge refused to give anything to him he threatened to withdraw his support.

The key, W. Vaughn, pastor of knox Memorial Chapel in Ninth avenue, called at the Morrisatia police station in the afternoon and said the description of Mauser tallied with that of the young fellow who had paid him a visit twice and asked for money. The young fellow's mother was a memoer of Mr. Vaughan's flock, according to the beggar's story.

Robert W. Hebbard, superintendent of the Agents of the Charity Organization Society, went to Tremont yesterday morning and identified young Mauser. The society helped him until they found out that he was a professional beggar, when they shut down. Mauser went away, saying that the people had better help him, that it would be somewhat dangerous to refuse him, and that houses burned easily.

neip nim. tant it would be somewhat dangerous to refuse him, and that houses burned easily.

Mauser was taken before Justice Duffy at the Morrisania Police Court yesterday and nemanded until this morning. Many clergrmen will be subpounded to testify against him. Detective Brady learned that hauser had boarded with a Mrs. Wallace at 185 West Fourteenth street for about two months a year or so ago. Mauser, the police say, was also employed by a Mrs. Bill, who lives in 114th street, but he remained only a short time before she told him to go. Shortly afterward her house was mystoriously set on fire.

Some of the well-known ministers whose names appear in Mauser's little memorandum book are the Rev. Dr. MacArtaur, the Rev. Dr. Charles DeW. Bridgman, the Rev. Fred G. Krotei, the Rev. Dr. J. H. Hylance, Mgr. Farley, Father Ducey, and the Rev. Patrick F. McSweeny.

Lawyer Mitchell admitted receiving the $1,200, and said it was for the use of his client. Collyer said the money he received was in payment of services rendered. He did not answer when Mr. Van lloesen asked him why he gave a note for that amount to Killeen them.

Justice Andrews reserved his decision. Killeen gave bonds when he was collecting the rents, but the bond was not renewed after his appointment as receiver. Lawyer Hayes said last evening that Killeen had made a monthly statement since he had been appointed receiver, except for the months of March and April. For these months he declined to make any statement.

"On the first or second day of the examination before lieferes Hubbard," said Mr. Hayes.
"the receiver declared that he had nil the rents in his possession, but at the hearing last Saturday he swore that he had only $3,000. This he said was in the Fifth National Hank, I got an injunction to-day to restrain the bank from paying him any of this moner."

Referee Killeen and Lawyers Mitchell and Collyer, to whom he says, he loaned money, occupy adjoining business offices.
